OREGON STATE'S 2005 COLLEGE WORLD SERIES TEAM
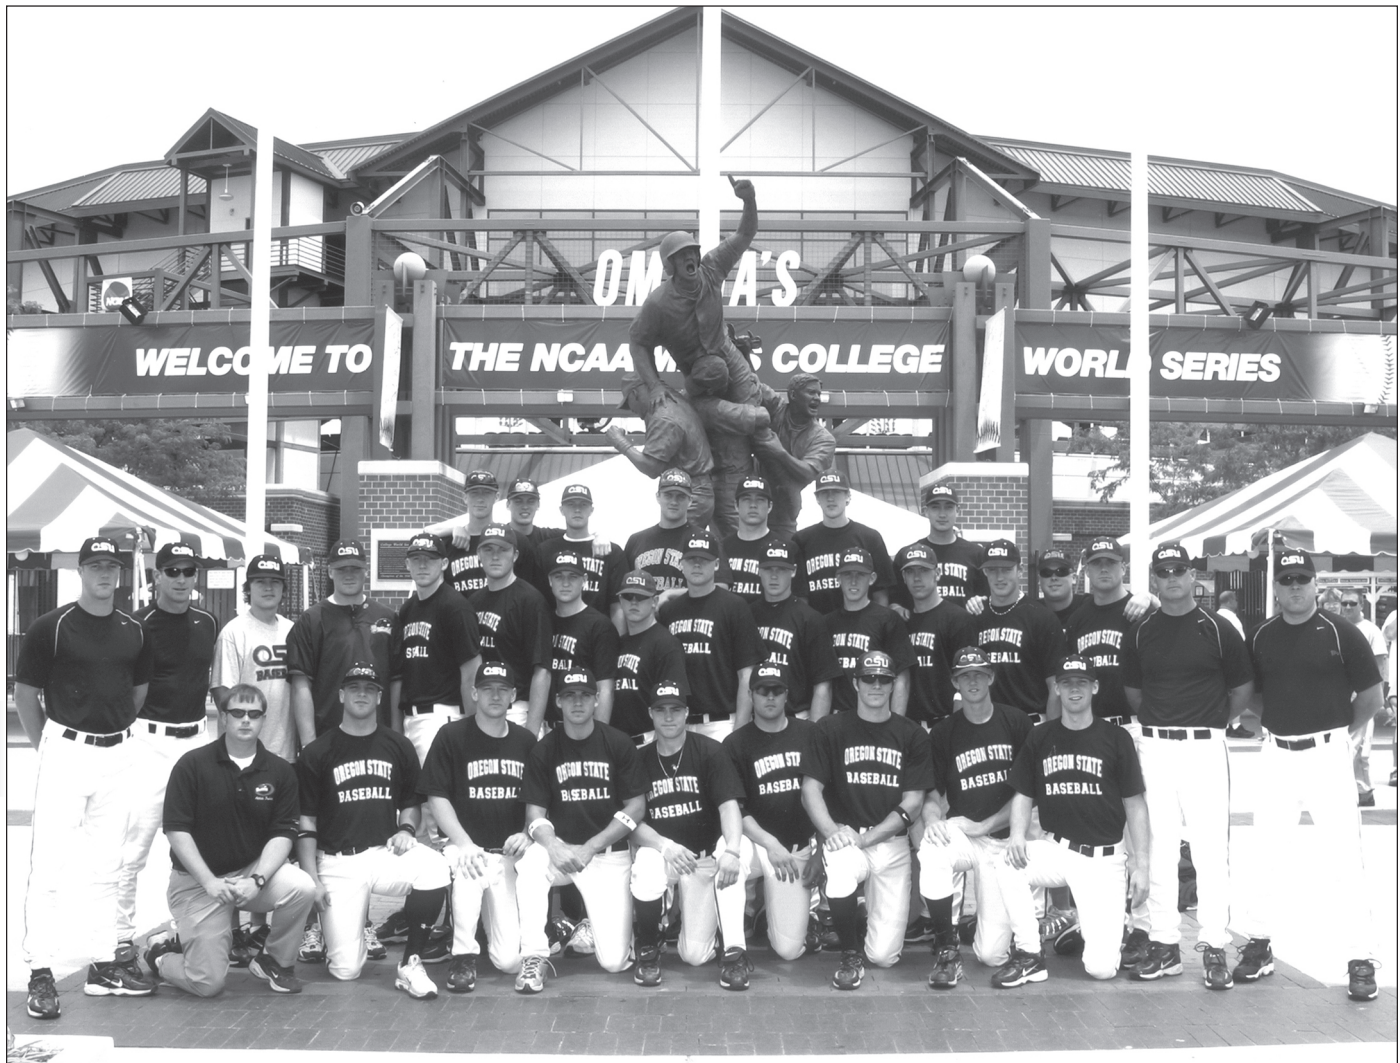

The 2005 Beavers at Johnny Rosenblatt Stadium, site of the College World Series

Coming from nowhere, going to Omaha

Beavers surprised the nation in 2005 with Pacific-10 title, trip to College World Series

In over a century of intercollegiate athletics at Oregon State, this was one of the truly special seasons.

It wasn't just that the Beavers won the Pacific-10 championship, reached the College World Series and set a school record for wins. There was more to the story of the 2005 Beavers. One reason the team captivated the entire state was the fact that over half the players were from Oregon.

"It's something you think about all the time," shortstop Darwin Barney said. "It means something to be playing for your city and your state."

It was also that this team wasn't given much of a chance in the preseason. But Oregon State eventually moved as high as No. 2 in the national polls, the Beavers' highest baseball ranking ever.

"It's an unbelievable feeling," OSU head coach Pat Casey said. "There are a lot of times these athletes get overlooked ...

"It's just a great tribute to the athletes and what they do, and to have it pay off and win a championship is just a dream."

In this case, a dream come true.

When the 2005 season began, Oregon State wasn't burdened by the weight of great expectations. OSU was picked to finish sixth in the Pacific-10 and the Beavers weren't mentioned in the national polls.

"They need a little game experience," Beaver head coach Pat Casey said of his club. "But we've worked tremendously hard toward some common goals and that's going to pay off for us."

OSU opened some eyes by beating ninth-ranked Arizona State 12-6 on its home field during the first weekend of the season. That propelled the Beavers to a 21-4 record heading into the Pac-10 season.

After sweeping California to start the conference slate, OSU visited nationally ranked Stanford and Arizona on back-to-back weekends. The Beavers took the series at Stanford and nearly took the series at Arizona, returning home as Pac-10 title contenders and a team climbing in the national rankings.

A win over Arizona State capped a 5-1 homestand against Washington State and the Sun Devils. The momentum carried over onto the road, where OSU swept series at both UCLA and Washington; the finale against the Huskies came in 10 innings after UW had tied the game with a two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth.

"It seems like every time we play a game, somebody on our club does something that impresses me," Casey said after that win. "Everything they do, they prepare for it. Now we're excited about coming home."

With Oregon State's regular season enter-ing its final weekend, it would be the Southern California Trojans standing between the Beavers and the Pac-10 title.

Oregon State went into the final weekend of its regular season with a shot at the Pacific-10 championship, and the Beavers took advantage of it.

A five-run bottom of the eighth inning gave OSU a 5-4 win over Southern California in the series opener on May 20. The Beavers - by now ranked as high as No. 3 in the country in some polls - used a familiar combination, with Dallas Buck getting the win and Kevin Gunderson the save; the OSU duo outdueled USC ace Ian Kennedy, who was a contender for numerous national pitcher of the year honors.

Late in the game the next day, word fil-tered down to the OSU dugout that Stanford had beaten Arizona; a Beaver win would guarantee a tie for the Pac-10 title. Oregon State wrapped up a 10-7 victory, then celebrated on the field.

"It crossed my mind that we had just done something extremely special for Oregon State University and the city of Corvallis," Gunderson said after recording the final out.

After eight straight weekends battling for at least a share of the championship in one of the nation's toughest conferences, it was time for a break.

Oregon State had wrapped up its regular season a week ahead of the rest of the Pacific-10, giving the Beavers Memorial Day weekend off. OSU spent May 27 holding Fan Appreciation Night, playing an intrasquad game and giving fans pizza and a chance to meet the players. The next day, the Beavers learned they were sole champions of the Pacific-10 for 2005 when California won at Arizona.

On May 29, the NCAA released its list of 16 sites for regional tournaments and Oregon State was on the list. The next day, the Beavers, their families and several dozen fans gathered to watch the NCAA selection show at the Hilton Garden Inn near campus. When the pairings were announced, Oregon State learned it would be the top seed in a field including Virginia, Ohio State and St. John's.

Tickets quickly sold out, even with extra bleacher seats having been brought in behind the rightfield fence. The geographically diverse field assembled and went through workouts at Goss Stadium at Coleman Field, and play got underway on Friday, June 3.

Some ballplayers go through life never experiencing the thrill of hitting a walk-off home run. After the opening day of the Corvallis Regional, Shea McFeely wasn't one of them.

McFeely accomplished the feat on the first pitch of the bottom of the ninth inning, sending the Beavers to a 4-3 win over Ohio State. With the score tied 3-3, McFeely launched his game-winning homer over the left-centerfield fence off Buckeye reliever Rory Meister. That capped an Oregon State comeback that had seen the Beavers tie the game with Cole Gillespie's two-out single in the bottom of the eighth.

McFeely annihilated the first pitch he saw – and the first pitch of the game by Meister – for his fifth home run of 2005.

"During warm-ups, he was throwing a lot of fastballs," McFeely said. "It looked like he was throwing pretty straight and over the top. That's what our scouting report said on him. I just went up there and he threw a first pitch fastball up and in."

Much of the game was a pitchers duel, as Jacoby Ellsbury takes a swing

Buck and Ohio State starter Mike Madsen surrendered three runs each.

A sellout crowd of 2,612 saw Oregon State play in its first NCAA Regional since 1986. It was also the Beavers' first home postseason appearance since 1963.

The next evening, Mitch Canham had four hits – including three doubles – and Jonah Nickerson struck out nine as he pitched a complete game for Oregon State in an 11-1 win over St. John's. The win before a sellout crowd of 2,609 advanced OSU into the championship game.

Canham tied his career high with four hits, and the three doubles tied OSU's single-game record.

"I'm just trying to be patient and lay off the off-speed stuff," Canham said. "I thank God for giving me good eyesight for the weekend and I hope we stay with it."

Nickerson scattered seven hits and didn't allow a run until the ninth inning, pitching his first complete game of the season and the second of his career.

"It's awesome," OSU's Andy Jenkins said of the win over the Red Storm. "It's what we've been working on all year and getting to do it at home is even more special. We're going to come out prepared, ready to go tomorrow."

Indeed, the Beavers were prepared on June 5. On a damp evening, a 13-run second inning propelled OSU to a 19-3 victory over St. John's, clinching the championship. The victory in front of 2,532 fans moved the Beavers into the Super Regionals, one step from the College World Series.

"We're one step away from every college baseball player's dream," said Jenkins, who had four of the Beavers' season-high 22 hits. Danny Anderson had a pair of home runs, and Anton Maxwell pitched the win.

Pat Casey exchanges lineups

Canham was named the Outstanding Player for the tournament, going 8-for-13 with one home run, three doubles, six runs batted in and six runs scored.

The Beavers learned they would again be at home for the Super Regionals, and the opponent would be Southern California. To earn a place in the College World Series, OSU would have to take a series from the 12-time national champions for the second time in four weeks.

By now, the Beavers were the biggest sports story in the state. Even more seats were added to the OSU ballpark, with bleachers replacing the batting cages behind leftfield, and still the series sold out before the first pitch the evening of Saturday, June 11.

The opener was a bizzare game in which Southern California made mistakes and Oregon State capitalized.

Ryan Gipson's single drove in the go-ahead run for the Beavers in the sixth inning and Jenkins added a three-run homer in the eighth to lead OSU to a 10-4 victory over the error-prone Trojans. The Beavers fell behind 4-1 early, but capitalized on eight USC errors.

"To me, the key to the whole thing was that we don't care how we win - we don't care if they surrendered, we don't care if we win by one or by 10 or whatever. At this point in the season, it's just go find a way to win," Casey said.

Buck kept the Beavers in the game against Kennedy; the OSU standout earned his 12th win of the season with 7 2/3 innings of work. Kennedy hadn't allowed the Beavers a hit until the fifth inning, but by then OSU had climbed back within 4-3.

In the sixth, McFeely scored on a wild pitch to tie the game at 4-4, then Gipson followed with his go-ahead single. Jenkins' homer capped OSU's five-run eighth inning, and the blast high over the leftfield fence sent the crowd of 3,059 into delirium.

It was the sort of win that gave one the feeling that these Beavers might be a team of destiny.

"Regardless of what happens offensively, what pitchers do, we always find a way to win," Gipson said. "We have all year, so there's something like that going on."

Oregon State takes batting practice before facing top-ranked Tulane

Still, if Oregon State was to reach the College World Series, it wouldn't come easy.

Billy Hart's bases-loaded infield single in the 10th inning drove in the winning run and Southern California rallied late to defeat Oregon State 9-8 the next day, evening the series. The Beavers saw USC score twice in the eighth inning and three times in the ninth to tie the game before winning in the 10th.

"I hope they react Monday like they've reacted all year long," Casey said of the Beavers. "We'll find out a lot about ourselves tomorrow, what guys we really have, what kind of competitors we are. If it were the third game today, it would be a pretty tough pill to swallow."

Oregon State held a 5-3 lead in the seventh inning, then Canham launched a three-run homer to to make it 8-3. But USC put together its late-inning comeback to force a third game.

"I think we made plenty of mistakes by the eighth - I don't think we relaxed at all," Casey said. "I thought we quit competing at the plate, and didn't compete at all at the plate after we got the five-run lead. We just basically surrendered some at-bats late in the game."

The Beavers appeared to be on their way to Omaha early in the game. Gipson hit a two-run home run for the Beavers in the fourth inning off USC starter Jack Spradlin. Anderson added a solo homer in the fifth to make it 3-0, but the lead wouldn't stand.

The next afternoon - Monday, June 13 - was the day that Oregon State went cycling all the way to Omaha.

Jenkins hit for the cycle, going 5-for-5 and driving in four runs as the Beavers beat Southern California 10-8 in the deciding game of the Super Regional.

"There's nothing like this," Jenkins said.

"This whole series has been a roller coaster. As coach (Casey) said, 'We're going to find out what we're made of today.' We came out and performed today; now we're going to go to Omaha and represent the Pac-10."

Said Casey: "I feel blessed, humbled, thankful – I guess it's a coach's dream. To have so many people here to witness that and to see those guys hold up that sign (from OSU's locker room) that says 'The Road To Omaha Starts Here' … it's awesome for me."

OSU also saw outfielder Jacoby Ellsbury break the school record for hits in a career, going 3-for-5 with a double to give him 234 hits, breaking the record of 232 set by Andy Jarvis from 2000-03.

A crowd of 2,752 was a sellout but just under capacity after the start of the game was moved up three hours for its national cable telecast. At least five members of OSU's 1952 College World Series team - pitchers Bud Berg, Bailey Brem and Norb Wellman, infielder Bobby Buob and outfielder Dwane Helbig - were on hand for the game. So was Paul Valenti, an assistant coach in 1952 who remained on OSU's athletic staff.

Oregon State had taken a 7-3 lead by the fifth inning, but Southern California tied the game with a four-run sixth inning before Eddie Kunz pitched the Beavers out of a jam, including a bases-loaded strikeout of USC slugger Jeff Clement.

The Beavers responded immediately, as Jenkins led off the bottom of the sixth inning with a triple - completing his cycle - and scored on McFeely's sacrifice fly. OSU added a pair of runs in the seventh on run-scoring singles by Barney and Jenkins to make it 10-7.

The Trojans did manage a run in the eighth, but Buck - making his first relief appearance in over a year - retired the final four USC hitters for the save, including a one-two-three ninth inning on just seven pitches to start the Beavers' celebration.

The crowd chanted "Omaha! Omaha!" as Jenkins fielded a grounder to first and raced to the bag for the final out, then hurled the ball into the outfield just as he was engulfed by his teammates.

It was apparent that afternoon that some people get long lunch breaks. Midway through the game, a Willamette & Pacific Railroad locomotive stopped on the tracks beyond the right-centerfield fence. It remained there for the rest of the contest, sounding its horn for each Beaver hit or putout and giving a long salute when Jenkins stepped on first base to record the final out.

Then the Beavers turned their thoughts to the College World Series, the event OSU hadn't played in since its only other CWS appearance in 1952. Coincidentally, Oregon State had also taken a three-game postseason series from USC in Corvallis en route to Omaha in 1952.

Oregon State had a day to get ready for its trip to the College World Series, then took a charter flight to Omaha on Wednesday, June 15. The Beavers were greeted by members of the Omaha Concorde Club, the community organization that would serve as OSU's host during the tournament, and news media were on hand when the Oregon State contingent arrived at its hotel in downtown Omaha.

The Beavers wouldn't open the tournament until playing top-ranked Tulane on Saturday. But the next day, Oregon State got its first real taste of the atmosphere that has come to surround the College World Series, and it made a definite impression on the Beavers.

"It's a dream - it's a dream come true," Oregon State catcher Casey Priseman said after that night's Opening Ceremonies at Rosenblatt Stadium. "I mean, look where we are right now. You can't really say much about it, you've got to experience it."

The Beavers took about an hour's worth of batting practice at Rosenblatt Stadium, then partook in a barbecue for all eight teams, an autograph session for fans and the Opening Ceremonies in front of approximately 10,000-15,000 fans.

"This is awesome," OSU outfielder/first baseman Cole Gillespie said. "This whole atmosphere is crazy. I've watched this on TV for years, and to be a part of this now is amazing.

"To see this many people here for the opening ceremonies is crazy. During the games, it's going to be even more crazy."

ESPN's Dave Ryan announced the eight
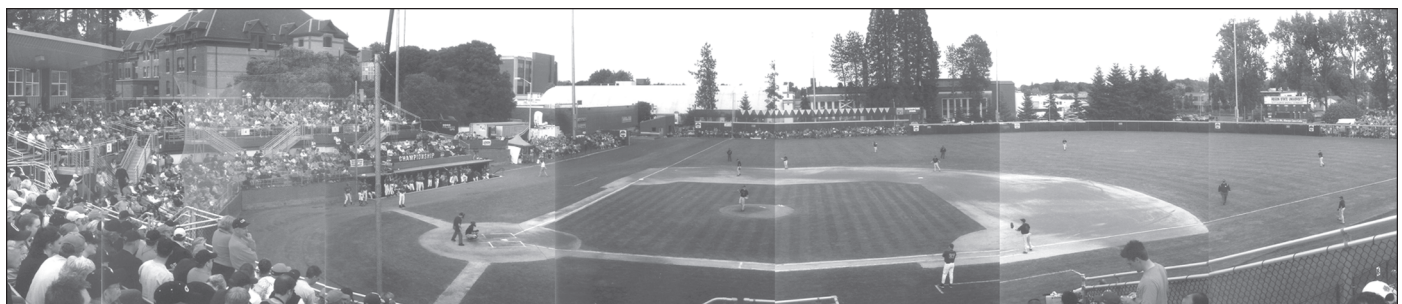

Fans packed Goss Stadium at Coleman Field during the NCAA Super Regional against Southern California

teams - Oregon State, Arizona State, Baylor, Florida, Nebraska, Tennessee, Texas and Tulane - to mark the official start of the 59th annual College World Series.

The teams marched onto the field, one-by-one, to a foray of fireworks, music, highlights on the stadium's video board, and of course, loads of applause from thousands of collegiate baseball fans.

The United States Navy "Leap Frogs" capped off the welcome as they parachuted into the stadium and delivered team flags to each of the eight schools, giving the Oregon State banner to Beaver co-captain Jenkins.

Before the ceremonies concluded, the "student" in student-athlete was honored as the NCAA Awards for Academic Excellence were presented to the player with the highest grade point average on each of the eight squads. That included Canham, who had a 3.54 GPA.

On Friday, OSU had an early afternoon practice at Creighton University, then attended the game between Pacific-10 compatriot Arizona State and home-state favorite Nebraska in the evening.

Then it was time to play.

For six innings on June 18, Oregon State looked ready to knock off the No. 1 team in the nation in the first round of the College World Series. But Tulane's Scott Madden delivered a two-out, two-run double just out of the reach of OSU rightfielder Gillespie in the seventh to send the Beavers to a 3-1 defeat.

The Beavers nearly turned an inning-ending double play prior to Madden's double, getting a hard-sliding Micah Owings at second base and just missing retiring Mark Hamilton at first base. OSU felt Owings had interfered with shortstop Barney on the play and Hamilton should be called out, but the umpires decided otherwise after conferring.

"I haven't seen the replay so I can't tell you if it affected the game," Casey said. "If there was contact and they had called interference, then we would have gotten out of the inning with no runs. If there was contact, it was a big part of the game but there are a lot of things that affect the game."

In the sixth inning, it looked like OSU would add to its 1-0 lead when Gillespie drove a ball into the right-centerfield gap with the bases loaded and two out. But Tulane rightfielder Brian Bogusevic made a diving catch to end the inning.

OSU starter Nickerson allowed just two runs in seven innings on seven hits and one walk, striking out five.

Another close game and another disappointment brought the season to a close on Monday, June 20.

drove home the winning run in the top of the 10th inning as Baylor ended Oregon State's season with a 4-3 defeat. The Beavers moved the tying run to second base in the bottom of the inning before the finest baseball season in OSU history came to an end.

"It's a tough time to talk right now," Casey said. "I don't want our guys to feel like coming in here and not winning a ballgame will take away from the great season we've had.

"I just want them to understand how well they played all year long."

Added Gunderson: "It's a sad day for Oregon State but there's always next year. It was a fun time even though we lost ... the Beavers will be back next year, I can promise you that."

OREGON STATE'S 1952 COLLEGE WORLD SERIES TEAM

Beavers peaked at right time to win big

Oregon State came up with crucial sweeps over USC, Fresno State to advance to Omaha

How long was Oregon State's trip to the 1952 College World Series? Well, it started in 1951 - but we'll get to that in a moment.

In 1952, Oregon State professor Bernard Malamud's novel "The Natural" was published, telling of Roy Hobbs' struggle to reach the top of the baseball world. Meanwhile, the Beavers were writing a baseball tale of their own.

Oregon State beat college baseball's most storied program – Southern California - for the Pacific Coast Conference title and then topped Fresno State for the Far West Regional championship.

"It's great to feel maybe you were part of something like this," 1952 Beaver captain Pete Goodbrod said not long after watching a televised CWS game.

And, Goodbrod recalled, it was an incident during the 1951 Pacific Coast Conference championship series in Los Angeles that may have spurred the Beavers a year later.

"We came on the field the first day for workouts," Goodbrod said. "And they (the Trojans) were calling us 'little gray things' and riding us pretty hard. Coley (Oregon State coach Ralph Coleman) didn't want us getting mixed up in anything like that, so we didn't say anything.

"About the only thing we could do in retaliation was during batting practice - hitting foul balls into their dugout."

After losing that best-of-three 1951 series in three games, the Beavers would earn more substantial satisfaction in 1952. Oregon State swept Southern California at Goss Stadium at Coleman Field for the PCC title; a week later, the Beavers swept Fresno State in another home series for the District 8 (Far West Regional) berth in the College World Series.

In Omaha, the heat, humidity and two tough opponents eliminated the Beavers in two games. Oregon State lost 18-7 to Duke and 10-1 to Texas.

"Personally, I think I was kind of awed as a sophomore going in there," said Dwane Helbig, who earned All-America honors as an outfielder that spring. "I don't think I played nearly as well as I could have, but that's all second-guessing."

The Beavers had played plenty well up until then. They went through their non-league schedule with a 12-3 record, still hearing the echoes of the Trojans' taunts from the spring before.

"It had a lot of influence on our seniors like Cub Houck, John Thomas, Bud Berg," Helbig said. "Those guys were real determined. A lot of our success stemmed from their experience.

"Being a dumb sophomore, I think I got caught up in it. That just accelerated everything."

Pitcher Bailey Brem, a junior in 1952, didn't see it quite that way.

"Others may have felt that kind of deal," Brem said. "My opinion was that we weren't trying to get back at them, we were just trying to play well."

Alex Goedhard, a senior pitcher on that squad, felt the ability was certainly there to play well.

"The team of '52 was an exception collection of raw talent, as I look back today," Goedhard recalled. "I say raw talent because we had no specialty training. There were no coaches specializing in hitting, fielding, outfield and pitching. There were no physical training regimens for players targeting playing positions outside of daily routine practice. There was no or very little scouting of opposing teams and players.

"Today's college players are given tremendous opportunities to improve technically and physically."

As it turned out, getting through the Northern Division would be the Beavers' toughest hurdle on the road to Omaha.

Oregon State opened the Northern Division season with six home games, going 4-2. The final game of the homestand was a 10-8 win over Washington on April 26, seen by a throng of 4,500 that was the largest-ever at Goss Stadium at Coleman Field to that point.

The Beavers then went on their annual road trip to Idaho, Washington State and Washington; Oregon State went 4-2 on that trip, as well. Returning home for two season-ending weekends against Oregon, the Beavers' 8-4 record narrowly led the division race.

A split with Oregon the next weekend kept the Beavers one-half game in front of the Ducks and one game in front of Washington. Oregon State eliminated Oregon from the race with a 7-6 win at Goss Stadium at Coleman Field on May 23, then lost 18-5 at the Ducks' Howe Field the next day in their regular-season finale.

That last Oregon State loss enabled Washington to move percentage points ahead of the Beavers in the standings, but the Huskies had two games remaining at last-place Idaho on May 26 and 27. Washington could win its first title since 1931 by winning both games; a Husky loss in either game would mean a first-place tie, and the Beavers would earn the postseason berth for having won three of four head-to-head meetings that spring.

"It's hard to say how we felt," Goodbrod said of the Beavers' wait for those two Washington-Idaho games. "Except that we wanted another shot against the Trojans."

Things looked bad for the Beavers when Washington thumped Idaho 17-4 in the first game at Moscow. In the season finale, though, Vandal pinch-hitter Dick Merrill doubled home the tying and winning runs with none out in the ninth inning for a 9-8 Idaho victory.

Oregon State was back in the Pacific Coast Conference playoffs.

"It was great to know we'd get a playoff with USC in Corvallis," Goodbrod said. "That made us feel good. We'd felt we were as good as they were the year before, and then we proved it by taking them in two straight."

The verbal barrage of the previous spring wasn't all that gave the Beavers something to prove. Even then, the Northern Division found itself in a little brother-big brother relationship with the Southern Division on the baseball diamond.

"USC was the powerhouse - there's no doubt about it," said Brem, who went on to All-America honors in 1953. "There was no doubt about that. We weren't supposed to go on the field with USC."

Added Goodbrod: It was, 'Hey, we've got a program up here, too. We need to be recognized'."

On May 30, the Beavers opened the series with a 12-10 win over Southern California; they had to hold off USC rallies that scored four runs in the seventh inning and five in the ninth. A day later, the Beavers wrapped up their first-ever PCC championship with a 5-4 victory.

On a cool, gray afternoon, the game was tied 4-4 going into a ninth inning that would send the Oregon State fans ringing the field through moments of both hope and despair. It would finish with perhaps the most notable hit in Beaver baseball history up to that time.

Once Oregon State had retired the Trojans in a scoreless top of the ninth, Beaver outfielder Bud Shirtcliff opened the bottom of the inning with a double but was thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple. After John Thomas singled, USC coach Rod Dedeaux brought in ace pitcher Tom Lovrich to relieve.

Lovrich hit Cub Houck with a pitch, then pitcher Norb Wellman's grounder back to the mound allowed both runners to advance. Two out, men on second and third, with Goodbrod coming to the plate; he blooped a pitch from Lovrich in the air toward third base.

The biggest Beaver hit ever would barely clear the infield.

"I kind of thought it would be an out," Goodbrod said. "I was running with my eye on it, and I was disgusted. I thought I'd popped it up. But that was Coley - run everything out.

"As I was going to first, I could see it was going to go over his (the third baseman's) head. In his defense, the sun was setting and I think he lost it.

"But it brought in the winning run."

Thomas, running from third base as soon as the ball was hit, touched the plate before the Trojans had a chance to make a play.

"It just erupted," Goodbrod said. "Everybody was out there on the field … the fans were crazy. We had to go back over to Gill (to the locker room), and we got there all right."

Goodbrod's hit came just four days after his May 27 birthday. When he arrived home after the game, his wife Joan had his cake on the table with a glove and ball decorating it.

By now, Beaver fans were turning out for ballgames like never before. A record crowd estimated at 5,000 would be on hand the next weekend when Oregon State wrapped up its District 8 championship series against Fresno State, which had beaten Seattle for the West Coast independent crown.

"Frankly, the crowd helped win those games for us," said Brem, who had to sit out the USC series because of an injury. "They got on the other team. All the fraternity guys were up in the stands riding them, and the Fresno State series was the same way. They had a pitcher named (Truman 'Tex') Clevenger who went on to play in the major leagues, and he threw real hard. The gol-durn guys in the stands got on him going 'Oooohhhh' when he'd throw, or 'Throw harder, Clevy, baby.'

"Sooner or later, he got wild, and we snuck through and beat them."

On June 6, Beaver lefthander Don White and the Bulldogs' Larry Bolger both threw six-hitters but Oregon State took a 2-1 win on Goodbrod's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

On June 7, Oregon State fans celebrated as

Oregon State Beavers Leave for NCAA Playoffs at Omaha

BATS AND BEAVERS OFF FOR 'BRASKA – Boding ill for the vaunted Blue Devils of Duke university Thursday afternoon, the hit-happy Oregon State Beavers carry their treasured war clubs aboard a bus for Portland enroute to the national NCAA playoffs at Omaha. Coach Ralph Coleman wanted to pack the bats away but the boys preferred to carry their own weapons, which incidentally slugged out 43 hits in 127 times at bat in four coast playoff games for a fat .339 average. With that average Coley said they could wear 'em around their necks if they wanted to. Waiting to board bus are standing left to right: Don Hopp, Norb Wellman, Cub Houck, Pete Goodbrod, Dwane Helbig, Chuck Fisk, Jim Ruggles, Jack Stephenson, Ed Nelson, Bud Shirtcliff, John Thomas, Jay Dean, Al Goedhard and Danny Johnston. The Beavers board the bus in Corvallis on the first leg of their trip the Beavers took a 4-1 lead, then anguished as Fresno State scored three runs in the seventh inning to tie things. But Jay Dean doubled and Helbig singled him home for the go-ahead run in the bottom of the seventh; Oregon State would add another three runs in the bottom of the eighth to ice an 8-4 victory.

After another celebration, the Beavers began looking forward to the College World Series, which was being played for just the sixth time. Oregon State would open against tourney favorite Duke in only the second athletic meeting ever between the two schools; the first had been the transplanted Rose Bowl on Jan. 1, 1942, in Durham, N.C.

"Going to Omaha was really something," Helbig said. "Everybody had to make arrangements to take finals late or early or whatever, and it was kind of a pain that way.

"But the excitement overshadowed everything else."

Coleman, assistant coach Paul Valenti and the rest of the Beavers went to Omaha by train on the Union Pacific streamliner City of Portland. They arrived at just after 3 a.m. on a Wednesday morning and were greeted by their hosts, the Omaha Cosmopolitan Club.

"We got off an air-conditioned train and stepped off onto the platform, and it was 96 degrees or something and the humidity was high," Helbig said. "Oh, lord, you couldn't sleep or do anything."

The Beavers' hotel wasn't air conditioned, and Brem recalls the method his roommate, Cub Houck, had for trying to get some shuteye.

"He'd go in the bathroom and get a wastebasket of water, then throw it on the bed and try to get some sleep," Brem said.

Duke brought a 30-5 record into the opener against the Beavers' 27-10 mark. On a 102-degree afternoon, Oregon State took an early 6-4 lead but the Blue Devils finished with 21 hits and an 18-7 win.

"The most memorable thing was that first game," Brem said. "Dick Groat (who later starred with the Pittsburgh Pirates) was their shortstop. We had on those northwest wool uniforms and the heat was about 105. I watched Dwane Helbig come in between innings, take off his wool baseball shirt, and wring the water out of it."

The next day, Texas eliminated the Beavers with a 10-1 decision. Oregon State was within 3-0 until the Longhorns five-run eighth inning.

"When we played Texas, we were in a fog," Helbig said. "We just never got into the game."

When the score got out of hand, Brem was allowed to get an inning of College World Series experience.

"I went out there and I wasn't throwing well - I was still hurt," Brem said. "But ev-ery ball I threw, they hit a line drive."

The Beavers headed for home, finishing their season with a 27-12 record. Coleman would guide Oregon State to three more Northern Division titles and have teams ranked as high as sixth in the nation in the early 1960s, but that 1952 trip remained OSU's only College World Series until 2005.

"We had Coley - I can't emphasize that enough," Goodbrod said of the coach whose dapper appearance masked a quiet intensity.

"He did it in a different way," Goodbrod said of Coleman's motivational techniques, which didn't include much in the way of hollering. "You'd be at bat, and he'd be over there with one knee on the ground, pulling grass … every pitch, he was in it.

"One game, we were tied with the winning runs on base and I was up. I was 0-for-4 on the day. He came over and said, 'Are you going to get a hit?' I said, 'Yes.' He said, 'Are you sure?'

"I can't overemphasize the fact he was one tough competitor."

Goedhard agreed.

"Any worry or nervousness the team had was exercised by Coach Coleman," Goedhard said. "On the bench, he was intense. He was a bundle of high nervous energy mixed with elements of superstition of where to sit, stand, etcetera during the flow of a game.

"Sitting next to Coley during a close game was not a preferred position, but it could be entertaining."

Many members of the 1952 team reunited at Goss Stadium at Coleman Field in 2002 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of their special season. They saw an Oregon State program that has had 24 winning seasons in the last 30 years and returned to the College World Series in 2005.

"Coley left, then Gene Tanselli came in and did a good job, and Jack Riley had a lot of good years, and now we're in capable hands with Pat Casey," Goodbrod said of the line of OSU coaches. "We've done pretty well."
